

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

United States of America,

Case No.: 2:13-cr-00148-JAD-GWF-2

Plaintiff

V.

Order Denying Motion to Vacate Sentence

Alexis Torres Simon,

[ECF No. 395]

Defendant

8 Alexis Simon is serving a 192-month federal prison sentence after a jury found him guilty
9 of being a felon in possession of a firearm and a slew of other federal crimes.¹ Simon moves
10 under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 to vacate his felon-in-possession conviction under the Supreme Court's 11 recent decision in Rehaif v. United States, which clarified that a defendant must be aware of his 12 status as a felon in order to be convicted of this firearm offense.² Despite the complexity of 13 § 2255 habeas proceedings, Simon's case can be summed up simply. Unlike the Rehaif
14 defendant, who was unaware that overstaying his visa meant that he was the type of person no
15 longer permitted to own recreational firearms, Simon was a known felon who, at the time of 16 conspiring to abduct a truck driver transporting narcotics, cannot reasonably claim that he was 17 unaware that he had been previously convicted of crimes with sentences exceeding one year. So
18 I find that Simon procedurally defaulted his claim because he cannot show a Rehaif error
19 prejudiced his trial, and I deny his motion.

23 ¹ ECF Nos. 254, 312, 316. The Ninth Circuit affirmed his judgment in 2015. See ECF No. 350.

² Rehaif v. United States, 139 S. Ct. 2191 (2019).

Discussion³

2 A federal prisoner may attack the legality of his conviction under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 by 3 showing that “the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution or the laws of the United 4 States,” “the court was without jurisdiction to impose such a sentence,” the sentence was in 5 “excess of the maximum authorized by law,” or the sentence is “otherwise subject to collateral
6 attack.”⁴ A prisoner filing a claim for federal habeas relief under § 2255 is entitled to an
7 evidentiary hearing “[u]nless the motion and the files and records of the case conclusively show
8 that the prisoner is entitled to no relief.”⁵

9 Relying on the Supreme Court’s decision in Rehaif v. United States, Simon argues that 10 his conviction violates the laws of the United States. In Rehaif, a defendant successfully 11 challenged his conviction for possessing a firearm as an alien unlawfully in the United States in 12 violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g).⁶ Overturning a broad consensus among the circuit courts, the 13 Supreme Court held that, in order to establish a violation of § 922(g), the government “must 14 prove both that the defendant knew he possessed a firearm and that he knew he belonged to the 15 relevant category of persons barred from possessing a firearm.”⁷ But Rehaif was a unique case:
16 the defendant—a student who’d overstayed his nonimmigrant visa—was unaware of his status,

¹⁸ ¹⁹ ³ Because the parties are familiar with the facts, I do not repeat them here except as necessary to my analysis.

⁴ 28 U.S.C. § 2255(a).

5 Id. § 2255(b); United States v. Leonti, 326 F.3d 1111, 1116 (9th Cir. 2003) (“We have characterized this standard as requiring an evidentiary hearing where ‘the movant has made specific factual allegations that, if true, state a claim on which relief could be granted.’”) (quoting United States v. Schaflander, 743 F.2d 714, 717 (9th Cir. 1984)). I find this motion suitable for resolution without an evidentiary hearing.

23 | ⁶ Rehaif, 139 S. Ct. at 2191.

⁷ Id. at 2200.

1 which precluded him from enjoying the “innocent” activity of owning and shooting firearms at a
 2 firing range.⁸ Invoking Rehaif’s reasoning, Simon attacks his 18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(1) and 3 924(a)(2) conviction, arguing that it was fatally defective because the superseding indictment
 4 and the jury instructions failed to allege both that Simon knew at the time of his conviction that 5 he belonged to the “category”⁹ of persons barred from possessing a firearm and that he knew he 6 was barred from possessing a firearm.¹⁰ He claims that these defects violated his rights under 7 the Fifth and Sixth Amendments.

8 I. Procedural default

9 The government argues that Simon procedurally defaulted his claim because he did not 10 challenge the sufficiency of his indictment on direct appeal. The “extraordinary remedy”¹¹ of 11 federal habeas “is not designed to provide criminal defendants multiple opportunities to 12 challenge their sentence.”¹² When a “criminal defendant could have raised a claim of error on 13 direct appeal but nonetheless failed to do,” he must demonstrate either “cause excusing his 14 procedural default” and “actual prejudice resulting from the claim of error,” or actual 15 innocence.¹³ The government points out that Simon does not assert an actual innocence claim
 16 and argues that Simon cannot show cause excusing his failure to raise these claims on appeal or

17
 18 ⁸ Id. at 2194–95.

19 For Simon, that category is the class of persons convicted of a crime punishable by 20 imprisonment for a term exceeding one year—in other words, convicted felons. See ECF No. 77
 21 at 5 (superseding indictment charging violations of 18 U.S.C. §§ 922(g)(1) and 924(a)(2)).

22 ¹⁰ ECF No. 395 at 5.

23 ¹¹ Bousley v. United States, 523 U.S. 614, 621 (1998).

¹² United States v. Johnson, 988 F.2d 941, 945 (9th Cir. 1993).

¹³ Id. (citing United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 168 (1982)); Bousley, 523 U.S. at 1611 (“Petitioner’s claim may still be reviewed in this collateral proceeding if he can establish that the constitutional error in his plea colloquy ‘has probably resulted in the conviction of one who is actually innocent.’”) (quoting Murray v. Carrier, 477 U.S. 478, 496 (1986)).

1 that he was prejudiced.¹⁴ Simon claims that (1) his indictment failed to assert a predicate
 2 offense, robbing this court of jurisdiction and excusing any procedural default; (2) the Rehaif
 3 decision effected a sea change in the law, excusing his failure to directly appeal his conviction;
 4 and (3) he was actually prejudiced or, in the alternative, the structural errors plaguing his
 5 conviction relieve him of the obligation to show prejudice.¹⁵

6 A. This court has jurisdiction over Simon.

7 Simon argues that his claim is exempt from the procedural-default rule because, under 8 Rehaif, the superseding indictment fails to properly allege an “offense” against the United 9 States.¹⁶ This court “has jurisdiction [over] all crimes cognizable under the authority of the 10 United States.”¹⁷ In United States v. Cotton, the Supreme Court unequivocally held that “defects
 11 in an indictment do not deprive a court of its power to adjudicate a case.”¹⁸ The Ninth Circuit, 12 other circuits, other judges within this district, and this court have repeatedly affirmed that an 13 indictment’s “omission of the knowledge[-]of[-]status requirement d[oes] not deprive the district 14 court of jurisdiction.”¹⁹ So even presuming the validity of Simon’s Rehaif-based claim, the 15
 16

17 ¹⁴ ECF No. 397 at 4.

18 ¹⁵ ECF Nos. 395, 398.

19 ¹⁶ ECF No. 398 at 11.

20 ¹⁷ Lamar v. United States, 240 U.S. 60, 65 (1916).

21 ¹⁸ United States v. Cotton, 533 U.S. 625, 630 (2002).

22 ¹⁹ E.g., United States v. Espinoza, 816 F. App’x 82, 84 (9th Cir. 2020) (citing Cotton, 535 U.S. at 23 631); United States v. Velasco-Medina, 305 F.3d 839, 845–46 (9th Cir. 2002) (reasoning that Cotton’s holding applies where “an indictment[] fail[s] to allege the specific intent required” for a crime)); United States v. Moore, 954 F.3d 1322, 1336 (11th Cir. 2020) (“[T]he law is clear: the omission of an element in an indictment does not deprive the district court of subject-matter jurisdiction.”); United States v. Kelbch, No. 3:17-cr-00040, 2021 WL 96242, at *2 (D. Nev. Jan.
 7, 2021); United States v. Reynolds, No. 2:16-cr-000296, 2020 WL 5235316, at *3 (D. Nev.
 Sept. 2, 2020) (Dorsey, J.). Simon cites no case to the contrary. See, e.g., ECF No. 398 11–15.

1 deficiency he identifies in his indictment does not preclude this court from exercising its 2 jurisdiction.

3 B. Simon has shown cause, but not prejudice, to stave off procedural default.

4 The government correctly notes that Simon did not challenge on direct appeal the 5 superseding indictment’s failure to allege—or the government’s failure to prove—that he knew
 6 that he had been convicted of a crime punishable by a term of imprisonment exceeding one
 7 year.²⁰ But “where a constitutional claim is so novel that its legal basis is not reasonably
 8 available to counsel, a defendant has cause for his failure to raise the claim in accordance with 9 applicable state procedures.”²¹ Rehaif’s holding is just such a novel claim, given that it
 10 “overturn[s] a longstanding and widespread practice to which [the] Court has not spoken, but 11 which a near-unanimous body of lower court authority has expressly approved.”²² So I find that 12 Simon has sufficiently shown cause to excuse his failure to raise this argument on direct appeal.

13 Simon has failed, however, to meet his burden of demonstrating that he was prejudiced 14 by the government’s omission. Actual prejudice “requires the petitioner to establish ‘not merely 15 that the errors at . . . trial created a possibility of prejudice, but that they worked to his actual and 16 substantial disadvantage.’”²³ To prove a felon-in-possession charge, the government’s obligation
 17 is not “burdensome,” and it may be inferred from circumstantial evidence.²⁴ At the time of his 18 conviction, Simon had been previously convicted of several felonies and sentenced to a term of

19
 20 21

 22²⁰ ECF No. 350.

23²¹ Reed v. Ross, 468 U.S. 1, 16 (1984).

24²² Reed, 468 U.S. at 17.

25²³ Bradford v. Davis, 923 F.3d 599, 613 (9th Cir. 2019) (emphasis omitted).

26²⁴ Rehaif, 139 S. Ct. at 2198.

1 imprisonment exceeding one year.²⁵ And at trial, Simon stipulated that he had been “convicted
 2 of a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year.”²⁶ This evidence proves
 3 beyond a reasonable doubt that Simon—unlike the Rehaif defendant—well knew at the time of 4 his offense that he had been convicted of “a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term
 5 exceeding one year.”²⁷ Thus, even if his indictment had stated and the jury been instructed to 6 find the mens rea element recognized in Rehaif, Simon’s verdict on the felon-in-possession count
 7 would have been the same.²⁸ So I find that Simon has failed to show that he was prejudiced by 8 this omission.

9 C. Simon’s deficient indictment does not present a structural error.

10 In the alternative, Simon argues that he need not show actual prejudice to overcome
 11 procedural default because his trial’s deficiencies are structural, in violation of the Fifth and 12 Sixth Amendments.²⁹ At the outset, Simon mischaracterizes Rehaif’s holding by arguing that it
 13 requires the government to both prove that Simon knew he belonged to the category of persons 14 prohibited from possessing firearms and that he himself knew that he was barred from owning

16

 25 Presentence Investigative Report at ¶ 72.

26 ECF Nos. 240 at 1; 294 at 68.

27 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1).

28 See, e.g., United States v. Hollingshed, 940 F.3d 410, 416 (8th Cir. 2019) (finding defendant 19 not entitled to relief under Rehaif when he stipulated at trial that he was a convicted felon and could not show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the proceedings would have been 20 different); Whitley v. United States, No. 04 CR. 1381, 2020 WL 1940897, at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Apr.
 22, 2020) (“[A]ny argument that Whitley was prejudiced therefrom is belied by the sheer 21 implausibility that, after having been convicted of multiple prior felony convictions for which sentences exceeding one year had been imposed, and having in fact served more than a year in 22 prison in connection therewith . . . , Whitley nevertheless lacked the requisite awareness of his restricted status.”).

23 29 ECF No. 398 at 10; see also United States v. Withers, 638 F.3d 1055, 1066 (9th Cir. 2011)
 (noting that structural errors can satisfy the procedural-default rule’s prejudice requirement).

1 firearms. Rehaif does not require that a § 924(g) defendant know that he was barred from 2 possessing a firearm; it clarifies that the government must demonstrate that a defendant “knew he
 3 belonged to the relevant category of persons barred from possessing a firearm.”³⁰ This subtle
 4 distinction is an important one. As the Ninth Circuit reasoned in United States v. Singh,
 5 requiring the government to prove that “the defendant knew his or her status prohibited firearm
 6 ownership or possession,” and not merely that the defendant belonged to the category of those 7 prohibited from owning a firearm, “would improperly raise the scienter requirement of 8 § 924(a)(2) from ‘knowingly’ to ‘willfully.’”³¹ So the government “must prove only that 9 [Simon] knew, at the time he possessed the firearm, that he belonged to one of the prohibited
 10 status groups enumerated in § 922(g).”³²

11 In light of Rehaif’s limited scope, I am not convinced that the government’s failure to 12 include an element of Simon’s § 922(g) charge presents a structural error. “[C]ertain errors, 13 termed structural errors might affect substantive rights regardless of their actual impact on an 14 appellant’s trial.”³³ As opposed to simple errors “in the trial process itself,”³⁴ structural errors
 15 “go to the framework within which judicial proceedings are conducted,” requiring “‘automatic 16 reversal of the conviction.’”³⁵ The Supreme Court has narrowed the types of errors that may be 17 deemed structural, recognizing errors like deprivation of counsel, lack of an impartial trial judge, 18

19 ³⁰ Rehaif, 139 S. Ct. at 2200.

20 ³¹ United States v. Singh, 979 F.3d 697, 727 (9th Cir. 2020).

21 ³² Id. at 728. Given Simon’s misreading of Rehaif, I decline to consider any alleged errors 22 predicated on the court’s failure to instruct the jury that Simon needed to know he could not possess a firearm.

23 ³³ United States v. Marcus, 560 U.S. 258, 263 (2010) (citations omitted).

24 ³⁴ Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 310 (1991).

25 ³⁵ McKinney v. Ryan, 813 F.3d 798, 821 (9th Cir. 2015) (en banc).

1 violations of the right to self-representation and a public trial, and an erroneous reasonable-doubt
 2 instruction as sufficiently egregious to excuse a claimant from proving actual prejudice.³⁶ But 3 structural errors must necessarily affect all aspects of a trial; they cannot be merely potentially 4 damaging.³⁷

5 While the Ninth Circuit has yet to definitively rule that a Rehaif error is not structural,³⁸
 6 its recent decisions have repeatedly recognized that Rehaif's reach is limited. In Tate v. United
 7 States, for example, the Ninth Circuit determined that the Rehaif Court announced a statutory 8 rule and “did not invoke any constitutional provision or principle,” thus its holding could not 9 sustain a successive § 2255 challenge.³⁹ And the panels in United States v. Benamor and United 10 States v. Johnson declined to treat a Rehaif error as structural and instead applied plain-error 11 review, declining to overturn sentences when the defendant failed to “show how the fairness, 12 integrity, or public reputation of judicial proceedings would be adversely affected by affirming 13 his conviction.”⁴⁰ Other circuits almost uniformly agree that omission of the knowledge-of-14 status requirement should not be treated like a structural error.⁴¹ And the Fourth Circuit, which 15

16³⁶ See Marcus, 560 U.S. at 263.

17³⁷ Accord Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1907 (2017).

18³⁸ See, e.g., United States v. Espinoza, 816 F. App'x 82, 84–85 (9th Cir. 2020) (expressing “no
 19 view” on whether “the district court’s failure to inform of him of the knowledge[-]of[-]status element constituted a ‘structural error’ that per se affected his substantial rights”).

20³⁹ Tate v. United States, 982 F.3d 1226, 1228 (9th Cir. 2020).

21⁴⁰ United States v. Johnson, No. 18-10016, 2020 WL 6305981, at *3 (9th Cir. Oct. 28, 2020)
 22 (declining, like the Espinoza panel, to consider whether a Rehaif-style error is structural); United 23 States v. Benamor, 937 F.3d 1182, 1189 (9th Cir. 2019) (applying the plain-error test and determining that “an error in not instructing the jury to make such a [Rehaif] finding did not affect [the defendant’s substantial rights or the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the trial”].

⁴¹ See, e.g., United States v. Burghardt, 939 F.3d 397, 403–05 (1st Cir. 2019); United States v. Hicks, 958 F.3d 399, 401–02 (5th Cir. 2020) (rejecting the notion that a Rehaif error is structural); United States v. Coleman, 961 F.3d 1024, 1029–30 (8th Cir. 2020) (rejecting the

1 remains the lone court to hold that this omission is structural,⁴² declined to revisit the issue en
 2 banc and, instead, called for the Supreme Court to resolve this rift within the circuits.⁴³ I agree
 3 with the reasoning of the majority of the circuit courts. Not only has the Supreme Court held
 4 that a district judge's failure to instruct the jury on an offense element (which is similar to an
 5 indictment's omission of an element) does not amount to structural error,⁴⁴ but the Rehaif Court
 6 remanded for harmless-error review rather than reversing the conviction outright.⁴⁵ So I decline
 7 to excuse Simon from making a showing of actual prejudice, and I deny his § 2255 motion.

8 II. Certificate of appealability

9 To appeal this order, Simon needs a certificate of appealability from a circuit or district
 10 judge.⁴⁶ In deciding whether to grant one, I consider if “reasonable jurists could debate whether 11 (or, for that matter, agree that) the petition should have been resolved in a different manner or 12 that the issues presented were adequate to deserve encouragement to proceed further.”⁴⁷

13

14 argument that a plea suffering from a Rehaif error is structural and applying a reasonable-15 probability standard to the third prong of plain-error review); see also United States v. Balde, 16 943 F.3d 73, 97–98 (2d Cir. 2019) (noting that in some cases a Rehaif error may have no effect on a defendant's conviction or decision to plead guilty).

17 ⁴² United States v. Gary, 954 F.3d 194, 205–06 (4th Cir. 2020), cert granted No. 20-444, 2021
 WL 77245 (Mem), 21 Cal. Daily Op. Serv. 214 (Jan. 8, 2021).

18 ⁴³ United States v. Gary, 963 F.3d 420, 420 (4th Cir. 2020) (en banc) (Wilkinson, J., concurring)
 19 (“I concur in the denial of rehearing en banc for one reason and one reason only. The panel’s holding is so incorrect and on an issue of such importance that I think the Supreme Court should 20 consider it promptly . . . Is it eight—or nine—circuits that disagree with us? I have lost count, but the ranks are growing.”).

21 ⁴⁴ Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 25 (1999); see also United States v. Dominguez Benitez, 542 U.S. 74, 81 n.6 (2004) (“The omission of a single Rule 11 warning without more is not colorably structural.”).

22 ⁴⁵ Rehaif, 139 S. Ct. at 2200.

23 ⁴⁶ 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(1)(B); Fed. R. App. P. 22(b)(1).

⁴⁷ Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 483–84 (2000) (internal quotation marks omitted).

1 Although this standard is “lenient,”⁴⁸ I find that Simon’s challenge does not meet it. So I deny
2 him a certificate of appealability.

3 Conclusion

4 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Simon’s motion to vacate under 28 U.S.C. § 2255
5 [ECF No. 395] is DENIED. The Clerk of Court is DIRECTED to enter a separate civil 6 judgment denying Simon’s § 2255 petition and denying a certificate of appealability. The 7 Clerk must also file this order and the civil judgment in this case and in the related civil case:
8 2:20-cv-01143.

9
10 U.S. District Judge Jennifer A. Dorsey
11 February 1, 2021

23
24
25
26
27
28
29 30
31
32
33
34
35
36
37
38
39
40
41
42
43
44
45
46
47
48 ⁴⁸ Hayward v. Marshall, 603 F.3d 546, 553 (9th Cir. 2010) (en banc).